

biography

Born and bred on the rough streets of Bronx, NY, Chris Gloss began life as a potential statistic. The strong willed and charismatic son of a devoted single mother, Chris often found himself in challenging situations, as he discovered his natural ability to influence classmates and friends to follow his lead. Fortunately, by high school, he made a life-changing decision to use his leadership abilities to influence others, solely, for their good.

Further cultivation of Chris' leadership abilities came as he defended his country in major conflicts, during his service in the United States Army. Maximizing on his talent for motivating others to greatness, Chris would go on to become highly successful in the sales arena, reaching top levels at numerous prestigious corporations, while simultaneously coaching fellow employees to improbable new heights.

An unrelenting passion for learning became the inspiration for a host of educational accomplishments at various respected institutions, including Mercer University, Central Texas College and Cameron University. That same passion would carry over into the world of personal development, resulting in mentorship by such industry greats as Zig Ziglar, Tom Hopkins and Les Brown.

Above and beyond impressive credentials, whether he is coaching sales teams or company execs, it's unquestionably Chris' inborn ability to arouse his audience with passion and conviction, to reach beyond self imposed limitations, that brands him the consummate motivator!

Having reached the seemingly impossible in his own life, Chris Gloss truly is the message that he brings.

“No matter where a person starts, that does not have to be their conclusion. I have seen it in my own life. I started on the bottom rungs of life and through hard work and determination, made it through the most challenging times of life“.

Chris Gloss “The Possibilitarian”

Specializing in Empowering People to always see the Possibilities, for they are always there

